Background Info

Established in 2002, Art UK (previously known as the Public Catalogue Foundation) is a dynamic arts charity with a national and global reach. Between 2003 and 2012 Art UK digitised 212,000 oil paintings from 3,200 locations across the UK. By doing so, Art UK transformed access to the UK's publicly owned art collection, much of which is not on regular display. In summer 2017 Art UK started a project to digitise the nation's sculpture collection.

Supported by a £2.8 million National Lottery grant, Art UK will catalogue the national sculpture collection. This major new initiative will put online the nation's sculpture collection and will include 3D, high and low relief works, figurative and abstract works from approx. the last 1000 years! Around 170,000 sculptures - located inside galleries, museums and public buildings or outdoors in parks, streets and squares - will be displayed on the Art UK website. The aim is to have all works of sculpture uploaded to www.artuk.org by January 2021.

Established in 2012, CultureStreet provides resources for children, young people and adults who work with them to find out more about the arts and have a go at arts activities themselves. CultureStreet has been commissioned by Art UK to support young people to review the nation's sculpture collection.
